Hand-made metal vessels

Kadim _ Modern Architypes

Kadim - a collection of contemporary human habits, captured in shape and matter.
The water carafe , the fruit bowl, the cookie jar, the shaker, the coffee to-go cup and a made-in-China one.
Their design implies vessels of Modern Archeology now crafted in thin metal; New Pottery.
Each vessel is made by hand with great attention and care.

The new vessel series by Studio  $\text{f}\epsilon$  is inspired by Artificial Intelligence - Metal that looks like Ancient Pottery . A reality of past and future merged together.

For each vessel I chose its own design language and together they produce a harmony of color & shape.

The Silo collection takes its inspiration from the architectural silo structures:

A powerful structure. Presence of a sealed body. Infinite surfaces of matter. Silhouettes of light and shadow.

A peek inside offers a third color that is a cheeky sequence to the exterior coloration.

The vessels are handmade.

fe studio wishes to submit design as a way of life. Our need for aesthetics, the beauty in details, feelings that colors evoke in us. Composition. Perception of space. Ergonomics. The presence of matter. All these take an integral part of the design language of the studio.

In an attempt to encourage proper consumerism, the studio takes the items we use on a daily basis and carefully reshapes them out metal; thus allowing them a longer life span. All items are handmade, manufactured in local factories.
